News Bulletin

The building of the new bigger manufacturing facility has just started

Masonry for the new manufacturing plant has kicked off at Gruppo Altea, parent company of Assemblad.

The new manufacturing facility, located in the outskirts of Catania, planned as a 3500 m² building on a 6000m² area, will be built in three modules with the first one entering in operations around mid 2020.

The new plant will mainly do mechanic and electronic hardware production, as well as final assembly, testing and quality insurance for automotive test equipment. Warehousing and logistics will also be managed there both for raw material and components and for finished products for the market. The other premises will be kept for the R&D, development, commercial and administrative departments also due to increase in workforce.

An overall increase of 30% workforce is also planned once the whole new building will be in operation, to be able to deliver the forecasted increase of the total produce.

Assemblad is proud to announce the news which is a confirmation of the great perspective of growth in the future.
